TYPES OF MAGAZINE ADVERTISEMENTS

CLASSIFIED ADS
Often found at the back of magazines

- Typically involves a few lines of text with contact information and a call to action (CTA).
- A logo or small photograph is included.
- Less expensive than full or partial page ads

ADVERTORIALS
Requires an entire page in the main part of a magazine.

- Written in the form of a story with an eye-catching headline.
- Magazine readers tend to gravitate towards these ads as they can be confused with part of the content.

DISPLAY ADS
Display products in a clear way along with some text.

- The most easily recognisable of all magazine ads.
- More expensive than the others, and mainly national brands are found on the pages of the most popular publications

DOUBLE PAGE SPREADS
Covers two pages

- A chance to talk to readers on their own without distraction, and create a world of their own.
- The wide rectangular space is excellent for telling a story.

GATEFOLDS
The page opens out and reveals two further pages beneath

- Their physical nature makes them demand reader attention and interaction.
- The additional width makes this a particularly good way of getting across a story or narrative.
